

Table 2: Expectations and Results for Biblical and Seth Crucifixion Hypotheses — Target #2

Target Subject: Judas Iscariot

Target Time: When Judas is leading the authorities to arrest the person the authorities presume to be Jesus

HYPOTHESES	EXPECTATIONS	RESULT
Biblical: Gethsemane betrayal scene	Inner conflict, guilt, possible anger (directed at Jesus)	Partially supported. No perceived anger toward Jesus
Seth: Judas leading authorities to fake Messiah	Inner conflict, guilt, possible anger (more general, at life, not directed at a person) sense of holding a secret, fear (of being discovered and caught), strong motivation to help someone not present at the target (possibly hidden or far away)	Supported
Location for both biblical and Seth versions	At the base of a steep hill with nearby large or heavy structures, nearby capital city	Supported

Target #2: The actual historical figure of Judas Iscariot at the target time specified below. The viewer is to focus only on the actual person in his actual historical reality, regardless of any culturally accepted historical view or interpretation of this reality, and regardless of any written historical account of this reality. Regardless of any and all popularly accepted views or interpretations, the viewer is to locate the actual person of Judas Iscariot during the time when he leads authorities to select a person for arrest who is perceived by the arresting authorities to be Jesus (Yeshua Ben Yosef). The viewer is to describe the surroundings of Judas Iscariot during this event. The viewer is to enter the mind of Judas Iscariot to perceive the emotions, thoughts, and mindset of this person at the time of this event.
